A Challenge-Tested Work Ethic
Your workday ends when a project is done well, not when the clock reads 5:00 p.m. Our students are used to that. We are considered by many to be among the most rigorous institutions in the country. Davidson students have been taught by demanding faculty who believe the students should earn their grades and succeed while balancing multiple assignments concurrently.

Knowledge and Skills Your Company Needs
Quantitative skills are at the cornerstone of many of our majors and programs. Our students' business preparations are bolstered through coursework in econometrics, accounting, international finance, computational economics, statistical methodology and analysis, and a complete range of mathematics offerings. The result is graduates with extensive practice in critical analysis who can understand your business challenges.

Our students develop their analytical writing and communication skills and must demonstrate a thorough attention to detail. They will be ready to produce high-quality work right away, and on the job they often become the de facto editors for written documents coming from their team.

Leadership and Teamwork at the Core
Few schools can boast that 25% of their student population competes in NCAA Division I athletics. More than 150 clubs and organizations, active Greek life and many other opportunities mean that our students leave here with the experience to work with and lead their peers.

Why Hire Davidson Students For Business?
You are not building an average company, and these are not your average college graduates. Find out why dozens of businesses choose Davidson College for their college recruiting programs.

“Can you imagine a college where students take unproctored exams at a time and place of their choosing? We can. Davidson students hold themselves and their peers accountable in all academic matters on campus, and those ethical standards shape their lives outside of the classroom and beyond graduation. Trust them to live up to your high expectations.”
