The Davidson experience combines academic rigor with a distinctively supportive community. Because challenge without community lacks purpose, and community without challenge lacks impact.
At Davidson, students complete internships, our campus-based innovation and entrepreneurship hub, deep alumni relationships, and a course of study that prepare students for the next step.

Action and experience are embedded into our immersive approach to learning. The drive to deepen professional and global perspectives runs deep at Davidson. We provide access to real-world experiences through internships, our campus-based innovation and entrepreneurship hub, deep alumni relationships, and a course of study that prepares students for the next step.

91% of the Class of 2018 international students are employed or continuing graduate school (7% employed, 1% continuing education).

Students who take part in Davidson’s international programs abroad have an opportunity to learn about and experience different cultures. The drive to deepen professional and global perspectives runs deep at Davidson. We provide access to real-world experience through internships, our campus-based innovation and entrepreneurship hub, deep alumni relationships, and a course of study that prepare students for the next step.

Where our students study, they may have the opportunity to immerse themselves in the local culture. Whether it’s attending cultural events in New Delhi or volunteering with the Slow Food movement in Italy, the experiences are diverse and unique.

International students have the opportunity to learn about different cultures. The students spend a minimum of two weeks in a host family. Students and their hosts often meet a few times a week.

A funded summer opportunity for Davidson international students is the Alvarez Access Program. All international students, regardless of financial aid, are eligible to apply for funding—two $4,000 grants—for every international student who applies. Funding is available for study abroad, internships, and volunteer opportunities.
